Dear All,

As I was going through the application rules today (as Vittorio also knows) I realized that -as Stefan already says- Vittorio and I cannot be the main applicants. From what I understand, each researcher needs a supervisor who will be the main applicant, and then the budget can include not only fieldwork expenses but also a salary for a post-doc researcher.

I then spoke to Umut, with whom I already made a Marie-Curie application, to make an application with our existing proposal and he agreed.

So I can make two suggestions:

1- If as a post-doc my name can appear in two post-doc positions, then Umut can make our environment application (because he is still under pressure to bring external grants to the CMES) and Stefan can make the digital middle east application where Vittorio and I share the workload/salary. I can work on social media in Turkey with pleasure.

2- If there can be two post-docs in one application, then I also suggest Vittorio to make a quick research about conflict and forest fires in Iran so that we could include that in our proposal and take Vittorio on board. So that we have equal chances :)

3- If this is not something that you prefer/doable, Stefan can make an application and involve Vittorio only. And Umut can make the other application where I can be the researcher. In the application website I saw main applicant, co applicant, and researcher. We can check with Spyros if there can be two researchers (but why not as long as they are 50%).

Let me underline here that I would like to work on the digital middle east project with you, and I am equally enthusiastic about it. So if there are no limitations, I am in for both!

Finally, Stefan, I really appreciate your interest in keeping Vittorio and I here :)
Likewise, Umut.

And Vittorio, how great are we that these guys want to keep us so badly ;)))

Best,
Pinar.

Thanks Stefan. It sounds perfect to me, but it is you and Umut that should agree on it as apparently you won't get much out of it. All I can ensure you is my willingness to work on it in case you decide to go for it.

Best

I'm looking at Crafoord now and, frankly, it's not really a bulls-eye setting for us.

Firstly, the main version for applications means one individual applying max 500tkr for stuff that is NOT salaries. And we can't really do anything with that, I guess, unless we frame it as a postdoc for Vittorio/Pinar, see below.

If I understand the second option correctly, which opens up for more funding, there is an opening for applying for post doc funding, in addition to a bunch of other non-salary stuff, but they seem to base it on a notion of that it preferably should relate to an already ongoing project.

Here:

PERHAPS, but it doesn't seem very clear from the text, we could apply for two postdocs (V and P), and then no salary costs for me and Umut and state that this is a project in development where we focus Iran and Turkey initially, and base it in the already written SFO application, with minor changes.

Sounds feasible to you?

We (probably me) should preferably clarify with the foundation first, if its even viable.

Hey Stefan

Are we doing the Digital Middle East for Crafoord or not?

The deadline is 1st of February as you know :-)

Dear Umut,

Here's what I prepared for next week. I put a flashback slide to some of the things you covered that are relevant to what I'll talk about.

Spyros, I left the Diaspora aspect out to cover it together with you, if you'll be able to make it to the lecture... (please do :))

So this will be a lecture? And I have 1.5-2 hours?

Best,

Pinar

Dear both

You will find the ppt's for the previous lectures attached, in case you would like to have an idea about what we have covered so far. Any - even passing - references to theory would be greatly appreciated.

And fyi, I will attend your lectures since they have now become part of a wider issue over which they have preferred to pick up a fight with me (yes, it is my turn now <OutlookEmoji-👉.png>). The issue is taken to the union.

Many thanks again in advance for your contributions.

Best, Umut
